This study primarily explored social media addiction. The author has successfully taken the first step in the research, which is a good start. However, there is indeed much room for improvement. For instance, there is confusion in the social media addiction terms, lacking a unified definition. Additionally, there is a disjointed flow between paragraphs in the introduction section. There is also a disconnect between the research questions and the introduction interpretation. This manuscript seems more like a patchwork. Certainly, there are also many grammar and formatting errors. Unfortunately, I do not recommend that other research cite this preprint in the future.
