The author writes on a review paper named "Diversity of the Ulidiidae Family (Insecta: Diptera)" in which he covers the fundamental aspects of family, such as Description, taxonomy, life cycle, morphology, and pest status, of the aforementioned family of Diptera.

In this study, the author provides 38 images, all of which are acquired from the internet and publications; nevertheless, the authors provide credit to the original sources of the images. I thought this study to be an excellent introduction to the topic of the family. The conclusion that can be formed from this research is very weak in quality and is much too brief. It is possible that the paper may be accepted for publication, if the journal does not have any objections to the data being gathered from secondary sources with authorization.

Comments

Title of the article should be modified as "Life cycle and feeding behaviour of the family Ulidiidae (Insecta: Diptera)".

Author has taken the images from internet sources and other research works. The Author has to give the justification whether he has got the written permission from the authors.

Writing a review article is excellent but the author has to incorporate his own research in the review article.
