After reviewing the paper entitled "Use of Digital Platform Among University Students: A Systematic Literature Review", I have a few suggestions :

Methodology Section: While the methodology is generally clear, it would benefit from explicitly stating the tool or software used for the Systematic Literature Review (SLR) analysis. Providing this information would enhance the replicability of your research.

Graphs and Visuals: It is important to mention the software or tool used to create the graphs and visuals presented in the paper. This will help readers understand the approach used in data representation.

Overall, the research paper is well-structured and makes a valuable contribution to the field. The objectives are clearly defined, and the analysis is thoughtful. With the inclusion of the mentioned details, the clarity and comprehensiveness of the methodology will be further strengthened.
