

Review of: "Using Taxes to Attract the Creative Class in the Presence of a Region-Specific Rent"

Yulong Sun

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article focuses on how rents affect the effectiveness of taxation in attracting creative class to locate and it is interesting to set out that when entrepreneurs make location decisions, they do not know the size of the rents in a given area. The latter article draws conclusions about the attractiveness of regions to the creative class under different scenarios, based on a number of hypotheses. The article's research is clear and the conclusions are instructive for practical purposes.