First of all, the article gives us an idea about neglected tropical diseases (NTDs) and their impact on developing countries. From the abstract, we get a clear overview of the article’s objectives.

I think the author should revise the methodology section once again. If there are some more details about the data collection in the methodology section, it could help the readers as well.

And the main thing is that, from the two tables and the graph, we get a fabulous picture of the data collection of NTDs and the research result.

I hope this article will enrich the literature on tropical neglected diseases in the coming days.
