Dear Authors,

Congratulations on your impressive work regarding the digital competence of educators in Zambia. Your dedication to this pertinent subject is commendable.

Your chosen theme holds great relevance within the current educational landscape, and your exploration of digital proficiency among teachers in Zambia provides valuable insights.

I'd like to offer a few suggestions for enhancing your article:

- Consider providing a brief introduction to the results section to guide readers through its layout and better understand the data presented.
- Discuss the potential practical implications of your findings for educational practices, policies, and teacher training.
- Offer a glimpse into future directions based on your results, suggesting recommendations for educators, institutions, and policymakers.
- Ensure a thorough proofreading to correct any minor errors, such as punctuation or typos.

Thank you for the opportunity to review your article. I believe these suggestions can contribute to the further development of your research, which holds significant value for the academic and educational community.

Best regards,

Anna Sánchez-Caballé
