The research gap is well-argued, but it lacks specific suggestions on how future research could address these gaps. Providing recommendations or proposing potential research methodologies could strengthen this manuscript. Moreover, while the article acknowledges the importance of considering studies from diverse geographical locations, delving deeper into potential cultural variations in the effectiveness of anger management programs in prisons would be beneficial. This could add nuance to the discussion and address the gap in studies from developing countries. Overall, it is a very interesting topic and worth exploring.
