The article underlines the importance of maintaining sustainable, affordable, and low-cost housing for middle and low-income classes in Uganda and looks at the housing sector, which plays a critical role in promoting inclusive development and reducing poverty and inequality. It is generally well organised and highlights such a vital issue with the housing needs in a country where the government, developers, and other stakeholders need to take action in order to empower their people. Hence, the article is a good summary of what the housing situation in Uganda is and what is needed to improve the existing structures to meet the sustainable development goals (SDGs) of housing in the country.
