

Review of: "The Support and Rehabilitation of Refugees – Personal Opinion and Experience"

Grace Lartey¹

¹ Western Kentucky University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The topic is relevant and important in today's world. The refugee issue continues to be a serious global crisis that needs addressing. The author's opinion and personal experiences resonates with many experts engaged in refugee research.

The paper is well written with minor edit. The author's shared experience is familiar with communities and individuals that support vulnerable populations. Support and mentorship provided in the different countries demonstrate passion, compassion and generosity towards a struggling population who have committed no crime. Readers and individuals working with this population demonstrate great empathy and will be glad to read about this paper.

Collaborative practices have thrived among refugee-supporting agencies and communities, a point that is emphasized in the paper. While there are challenges in this field, the opportunities to grow as humans and to help make the world a better place are clearly depicted in the paper.

Minor edits:

Page 1:

Abstract -

Line 1: comma after anyone, start but with lower case b.

Line 6: Supporting them change country to countries.

Page 2: In 2014, he asked

Page 2: change the contraction we'd to we had. Change all contractions throughout the paper.

Page 2: their mental health, which.....

Page 4: in summer 2017, establishing

Page 4: when they complete their education (delete own)

Page 4: attainments in the into the local economy, which will ...

Page 6: The cost of both food and rent rose

Page 6: This way, we can achieve long term

Page 8: During this period, I worked full-time supporting ...

Page 10: In Tanzania, we have shown that

The paper is well written and tells a very good story, including the challenges that individuals in this field face as they give their time and resources to support such a cause.