This is an interesting and very important topic. However, the structure and technical language are very poor and need to be corrected by a native English speaker with knowledge of the topic.

The structure of the manuscript is very confusing. At the start, there are a lot of introductory or review parts related to forest importance, climate change, and "green legacy". This has been explained quite lately and adds to the confusion. Then comes the shorter methodological section, which includes a large amount of unnecessary information and a poorly described modeling section. At the end, results and discussions are given that are the shortest parts of the manuscript in combination. Personally, I think that the manuscript does not provide a clear research idea or focus. Needs to be restructured and shortened and be either a review or a research paper.
