

Peer Review

Review of: "From Theory to Practice: The Impact of E-Learning on Student Performance, Trends, and Educational Horizons"

Rosniati Hakim¹

1. Universitas Muhammadiyah Sumatera Barat, Padang, Indonesia

Assalamu'alaikum wa rahmatullahi wa barakatuh

Dear Author,

I am pleased to have the opportunity to re-review your research. The title of your study is very engaging, especially considering the global COVID-19 pandemic, which led to the replacement of traditional classrooms with e-learning platforms. These platforms have played a vital role in ensuring the continuity of education during this period.

Your chosen title, "From Theory to Practice: The Impact of E-Learning on Student Performance, Trends, and Educational Horizons," accurately reflects the importance of your research. Throughout my review, I have shared comments and feedback, and I want to commend you for your excellent work. Each section of your research is well-structured and supported by relevant data, making it enjoyable and insightful to read.

I strongly agree with the conclusions and recommendations you presented. Your suggestion to conduct larger studies to further develop digital education and improve student learning outcomes is highly relevant. To fully understand and enhance the impact of e-learning on student performance, it is important to use effective methods for expanding knowledge in this field.

Your findings highlight the need for everyone involved in education—especially teachers and school leaders—to work harder to improve education. This research serves as a valuable guide for educators dealing with the changes caused by the COVID-19 pandemic. While the future is uncertain, your study offers meaningful insights for adapting to new educational challenges.

In particular, your research on the impact of COVID-19 makes a valuable contribution to the education field. I appreciate this work, as it reinforces the idea that education must continue as long as people are alive. Different methods and approaches must be used to ensure learning continues, and through the efforts of researchers and experts like yourself, solutions can be found and implemented.

Thank you for your dedication and valuable contributions.

Wassalam..

Declarations

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.