

Review of: "Examining the Ethical and Geopolitical Context of Global Food Security Policy"

Mohammed Torki Bani Salameh

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Dr. Vojtěch Mašek's document provides a critical review of 'Collective Action for Ending a Collective Problem' by Dublin City University, focusing on the ethical and geopolitical aspects of food security. It discusses the feasibility of resolving food security issues, the role of multi-stakeholder approaches, faith communities' involvement, and the relationship between food rights and civil liberties. The document also critiques the report's views on market economies, democracy, disarmament, and the global security landscape, particularly in the context of the Russian-Ukraine conflict.

Strengths:

Comprehensive Analysis: Offers a detailed critique, providing a multi-dimensional perspective.

Critical Perspective: Challenges foundational assumptions and conclusions of the report.

Areas for Improvement:

Nexus between Water and Food: The author should elaborate more on the interconnections between water and food security.

Water Crisis and Conflict: Expand on the topic of water crisis and its role in conflicts, particularly in the Middle East.

Direct References: The author is advised to directly cite the following references in their discussion:

References for Citation:

Salameh, M.T.B., Alraggad, M. & Harahsheh, S.T. (2021). The water crisis and the conflict in the Middle East. Sustainable Water Resources Management, 7, 69. <https://doi.org/10.1007/s40899-021-00549-1>

Salameh, M. (2021). Dam Wars: Are Ethiopia, Turkey, and Iran Leading to Water Armageddon?. Middle East Policy, 28, 147–157. <https://doi.org/10.1111/mepo.12547>

