The Sectoral GDP and Tax Revenue: a Panel Data Analysis v1 paper has several weaknesses. Firstly, the paper does not provide a theoretical basis to explain the results found. Secondly, the authors have used a simplified econometric method which may not accurately reflect the reality. Thirdly, the paper does not provide a detailed description of the data used in the study, or tests for stationarity. Fourthly, the authors have not discussed the contribution of each sector to the gross domestic product, or the value added to the gross domestic product. Finally, the paper does not provide a discussion of the implications of the results for the government.
