Review of: "Building a digital republic to reduce health disparities and improve population health in the United States"

Manal Etemadi

The paper addressed an important issue that could be a game changer not only for the US's health and welfare system, but also for other countries.

there is some point that if be addressed well, the paper would be much more effective to become an agenda for the health systems worldwide.

1- Although the political economy has been mentioned in the abstract, but you need to address it further with specific focus on the governance of digital republic which includes the networks of several actors play in this ground.

2- the main concept of this paper is the digital republic and automation of social policies, which include the integration of the social-health services and benefits integration. but there is a point. we should have to some extend a single window for comprehensive and multi-layer welfare system including health insurance in a single window to be able to digitize it to a digital identity card. to which extend is there such an integrated system and what measure the government s should take to break the Berlin wall between the social and health services: please take a look to this paper:

http://www.peah.it/2022/08/11397/