The manuscript deals with a very important topic. However, it needs adjustments for its publication.

The Introduction, as well as the Theoretical Reference are repetitive, with several paragraphs containing the same information. It is possible that this is due to the use of some authors repeatedly, which sacrificed the presentation of the state of the art and the gaps that this study intended to fill.

It is presented more like a diagnosis, not being characterized as a scientific article properly.

The Methodology could provide information on which keywords were adopted. And discern exactly whether this is a review article or not. Including the methods used to carry out the analyses.

The results, represent the information already brought previously. In addition, it is suggested that photographs are not used in scientific texts, unless they are the object of study.
