The article contains several interesting results; however, before publication, there are some things that need to be addressed as follows:

1. English should be revised carefully for typos and grammatical errors.
2. Abbreviations should be clarified.
3. An abstract should be rewritten to be more clear and precise.
4. Missing numeric values result in the abstract.
5. The fabrication process and conditions need more explanation, with the aid of photos if possible.
6. Insert a table that contains descriptions of the samples to be more understandable.
7. Discussion needs to be improved; discuss in detail all results obtained. The authors were more or less satisfied with just describing their own experiments. An explanation of the reasons for the improvement is required.
8. The microscopic characterization of the prepared specimens has not been done. It is required to evaluate the success in wetting of layers in the fabricated samples.
9. In the conclusion section, it is not preferred to put the abbreviations; please put in details.
10. Conclusions could be written in point form.
11. More recent references should be added.
