

Review of: "Sero-prevalence of Viral Hepatitis B and C infection and associated factors among Pregnant Women in Southeast Ethiopia: Community-based crossectional study"

Sharad Oli¹

¹ Wayne State University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Great paper, nicely summarized.

Few points to clarify:

-What was the rate/incidence of repeat infection in the study population? Was any sub-group analysis done?

-With newer treatments available for hepatitis C infection with nearly 100% cure rates, it should have a huge impact on the prevalence. It is not clear what the health care access/utilization is in the study population.