

Review of: "In-Vitro Antibacterial Activity of some Ganoderma Species: A Review"

Debulman Syiemiong

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

- I think the title of the article should have been "In-Vitro Antimicrobial Activity of Some Ganoderma Species: A Review" because antifungal activity was also reported in the article.
- Line 1 in the Abstract: I think the authors meant "research on natural products."
- I think the article needed an introduction section.
- Table 1 needs a caption.
- The findings reported by various researchers could have been presented in a more organized way and interpreted by the authors in their own original and clear summary.
- On certain occasions, Ganoderma was mistakenly addressed as a plant when it is a fungus.
- The conclusion section could have been better if it reflected a summary of the article. Future prospects and research gaps on Ganoderma as a potential resource to fight microbial infections could have also been mentioned in the conclusion section.
- Overall, the article needed proper screening for grammatical and typographical errors.
- Some words and statements were repeated in certain sections of the article, though in different forms.