Abstract:

The abstract that has been prepared contains the essence of the research. However, it would be better if the abstract were equipped with research methods, data collection techniques, and research subjects. At the end of the paragraph, authors should write recommendations for further research.

Introduction

The introduction contains several literature reviews of previous research and basic theory. However, authors need to sharpen and increase the number of references to cite statements adapted from previous research.

Research gaps are not yet visible in this study. The author needs to sharpen the focus of this research to make it different from the facts or results of previous research. Apart from that, real phenomena that are written about should be provided with data on the time they were taken and the location.

The novelty of the research is also not apparent based on the results of previous research presented.

Methodology

The research method already mentions data collection techniques, namely using informal interviews. However, it is necessary to write a statement about who, where, how many, and what special characteristics the research subjects have. Apart from that, even though using informal questions, the author should include the focus of the questions or important aspects that are used as an interview guide.

Research Findings

The research results section includes specific findings from the results of the field studies conducted. However, the author needs to add diagrams or charts that show the teachers' varied teaching techniques.

Wrap-up Comments, Remarks, or Conclusion

Because in the acknowledgment there is the term "primary school," this section needs to be adjusted to the use of mathematics material that is not for primary school, both in terms of references and descriptions of written research results.
