Authors should definitely reconsider writing the results section.

The results section without any index only mentions that the study has reached 100% success. Success in what? With what index? Which data showed the success of your treatment?

The results section in the abstract should also be corrected, and the method section in the abstract is also incomplete. What is meant by biomaterial is not mentioned in the abstract.

According to the figures, it is not clear whether PRGF or PRF was used.

In general, it seems that a major revision is needed in the description of the method, materials, and results and adding more resources to discuss the results.
