

Review of: "Nigeria's Implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals"

Tam Abaku¹

¹ Tallinn University of Technology

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

You have done a great job with this scholarly contribution. The article is commendably timely and adeptly addresses the pivotal issues impeding Nigeria's progress toward the realization of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Notably, the congruence between the article's title and its substantive content is duly acknowledged.

The structure of your manuscript is commendable, adhering meticulously to the prescribed steps for conducting a review of reviews. The abstract adeptly encapsulates all pertinent aspects of the paper, seamlessly leading the reader through the introduction to the subsequent review section. The methodology is presented with clarity, and the articulation of recommendations to address identified issues is noteworthy.

Nevertheless, it is apparent that certain nuances within the abstract, such as "terrorist activities, extended periods of strike in the universities, and instability in oil prices, for an economy that derives 86% of public revenue from oil....", lack the requisite elaboration in the subsequent review section. To fortify the integrity of your arguments and proposals, it is imperative to integrate additional insights from credible sources that substantiate the gravity of these issues. Failure to do so may compromise the robustness of the scholarly foundation upon which your proposed mitigation strategies rest. Therefore, it is recommended that you incorporate the pertinent sources elucidating the severity of the aforementioned issues within the review section, thereby fortifying the scholarly underpinning of your paper.

The citations utilized are not only pertinent to the thematic focus but also exhibit contemporaneity, reflecting the latest developments in scholarly discourse on the subject.

I look forward to reading the final publication.