The article seems to offer valuable insights into the factors influencing sexual empowerment among its target demographic. The study's scope is limited to a specific demographic in a particular location, affecting the generalizability of the findings. The lack of detailed methodological discussion raises some critical questions. Moreover, the reliance on qualitative data is seen here. For the above topic, I believe some quantitative approaches were required, making it a mixed method. Cultural sensitivity is also a crucial factor, considering South Africa's diverse cultural landscape. That could be better dealt with. It seems that the article could benefit from suggestions for future research directions, such as exploring the effectiveness of sexual education programs and addressing cultural taboos surrounding sexuality.
