Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

- Gaps in the literature are missing pieces or insufficient information in the published research on a topic.
- If you are writing in the social sciences and many of your citations are more than three to five years old, the reviewers may state that the article is not up to date."
- Inconsistent sample sizes between methodology and results. Researchers should explain, why the sample size in results is greater than in methodology.
- The researcher should always formulate a hypothesis before collecting data and analysis.
- The article is not shown theoretical contributions and practical implication. It is great value in research.
- The language easy to understand and clear for the reader.
