Some limitations are present in this paper.

The first is the retrospective nature with a small sample size.

Rezum treatment is a trending topic, and a lot of papers have been published in the last few years.

To improve the article, I think that a statistical analysis of the pre- and post-treatment parameters could add value to this article.

The authors should not write that this paper is the first Turkish experience with Rezum if there are two Turkish series published in the literature.

When they discuss the ejaculation results in the discussion section, they must cite the four available studies.
