I commend the effort of the authors. The approach analytical approach adopted in the paper present deeper insights into the interaction between factors that contribute to labour unrest in the industry. Nonetheless, there are a few typographical grammatical errors that need to be fixed. Also, the literature review can be significantly improved, to include review of factors from other work environments other than the garment industry in Bangladesh.

It is suggested that the methodology section to be restructured for clarity of expression. It is not quite clear what informed the selection of the six regions as having higher level of unrest. Was there any statistical data to support the claim of them having higher unrest? Also, it is suggested that the declaration of IRB review clearance should be moved to the end of the paper and not in methodology.
