

Review of: "Use of Digital Platforms Among University Students: A Systematic Literature Review"

Smritishikha Choudhury¹

¹ Krishna Kanta Handiqui State Open University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study, which is based on secondary data, provides a comprehensive explanation of the use of digital platforms in the higher education sector. The methodology is clearly articulated. However, the findings related to the use of MOOCs and LMSs tend to be more generic and lack specific insights. The authors can add how many higher educational institutions are providing MOOCs and LMS services to their students from their literature review.