

Review of: "Post-Conflict Reconstruction: How Social Identity Change Informs our Understanding of the Ukrainian Experience of Forced Migration"

Sara Al Beainy

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This research is so interesting; however, there are some points that, if fixed, will definitely make the article more comprehensive and easier to read and understand:

1. I suggest going over the introduction "Families..... sanctuary" to review the writing and choice of words to make it clearer.
2. Under the section "Stress and Wellbeing in a Post-Migration Context," there is a run-on: "As Alfidhli.... refugee groups." Kindly review this.
3. Under the section "The Social Identity Approach and Social Identity Change," there is a run-on: "In Muldoon et al.'s (2019)....post-traumatic growth." Kindly review this.
4. Under the section "The Social Identity Approach and Social Identity Change," there is a run-on: "Howevr....impacting wellbeing." Kindly review this.
5. Under the section "Semi-Structured Interview Schedule," there is a wrong word: "They were asked where they lived, with whom, and what life was like before the war started." Kindly review this.
6. Procedure: "Interviews were carried out between September 2022 and December 2022. All participants were contacted through local Ukrainian support communities, either via face-to-face or via social media appeals to Ukrainian Facebook communities." What about their consent for participation?
7. "All names have been changed to maintain anonymity." Kindly review.
8. What about the data collected: what happened to it after the study was done? The data will be destroyed by shredding the paper and permanently erasing the digital data.

Best of luck!