

Review of: "Mobile Phone Recycling and Stockpiling Behaviour in the UAE: A Gender and Age Study"

Debo Brata Paul Argha

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This article points out a contemporary problem in modern days. The analogy and survey were organized well to represent the research. More focus may be given to the research gap. More literature and/or background study may be attached to depict the bigger picture. The basis of questionnaire (based on age, education, gender, job, city/rural area) and any statistical distribution can be added to make the survey more methodical and scientific. The mathematical models used in this study should be more detailed oriented. The manuscript is well written, still there is enough room for grammatical and sentence structure improvement. Tables and figures appropriately represent the data set. E waste management, environmental impact analysis, life cycle cost analysis may be added to the literature section. Although behavior pattern was included in the title of the paper, it was not discussed clearly in the manuscript. There needs to be some work to make the objectives, statements, and conclusions more precise. It is not recommended to repeat the same idea, concept, or materials in different chapters.