The article has clear objectives and achieves those objectives. The rescued values from a theological perspective are very necessary in the present world. Its advocacy for environmental issues and environmental health is just.

However, when I evaluate the used methodology I find a flaw. Catholic theology has three sources of authority: tradition, church, teaching, and the Bible. I noticed that the first two ones have been used in the article, but not the third one. I found only a couple of Bible texts or less. An evaluation of the present world from a biblical perspective is abundant and it can provide a theoretical framework that could explain what is happening in the current world, and can provide the most appropriate solutions.

Finally, I would suggest to the author to include technological disruption in the discussion, which is one of the biggest concerns in the current world together with environmental challenges.
