

Review of: "“Saving the Forest” with a REDD+ Project: Socio-Ecological Repercussions on Indigenous People in Cambodia"

Ana Isabel Renda¹

¹ Universidade do Algarve

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

In my opinion, the article explores a subject of great interest both from a scientific point of view and in relation to the reality under study, in this case specifically about the people of Cambodia and the importance of protecting the forest.

I think the article should explain in detail how the data was collected through the interviews, how the subjects were selected, the particularities of the interaction during this data collection, and how the difficulties were overcome.

It would also be important to understand in detail how the information was processed and to include a discussion in the article in which the data obtained could be compared with other studies carried out.

In my view, including these aspects would add more scientific value to the work.

In any case, I congratulate the authors and suggest that they continue their research into these issues, which are so relevant today.