

Review of: "Cults and the LGBTQ Community: A Systematic Review Using PRISMA"

Marcello Beckert Zappellini¹

¹ Universidade do Estado de Santa Catarina

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This paper is well-written, and it is clearly a result of extensive research. The topic is current, relevant, and requires further academic discussions, so this paper can be considered an important addition to studies on the relationships between religious and LGBTQ groups and organizations. One question that remained open to this reviewer is how the Jewish faith deals with this issue. Is there no literature on the subject, or did the author choose not to explore this relationship? I think it is important that there should be some mention of this topic.

In my opinion, it is important to have more details about the application of the method in order to ensure that those interested in the subject can replicate the research if they wish. In addition, I consider that the discussion of the results could be a little more extensive, exploring more deeply the findings made in the literature review.

I recommend publishing the article, but I would like to see the above suggestions, or at least an explanation of the reasons for not addressing them.