The article is based on a very good and witty idea. And probably that is a novel idea.

A well composed study.

However, I would like to add a few small comments:

Figure 2: It is not possible to clearly identify individual areas with the help of colors. Another method would be welcomed for representing.

Section Results: You put references for your discussion of results from the list of references. Are references in the list a part of the 1071 scientific articles retrieved and gathered from Scopus? It should be so.
