I really appreciate the presentation of the article with clear language. Yet initially, starting from the abstract, the manuscript is full of jargon that made understanding of the message difficult. Despite the possibility to maintain some of these jargon, I suggest either using everyday English wherever possible or providing a brief definition at first. Otherwise, it is difficult to continue reading and comprehend the case study findings in Salamina. I believe it is possible to make the manuscript appealing to non-experts as well and make it more readable. I suggest also using tabular presentations in the results section. Sorry for the unintended several empty review posts.
