

Review of: "Reversible transliteration of the historical Ukrainian alphabets in the context of heritage preservation and linguistic technologies development"

Hossein Hassani<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> University of Kurdistan Hewlêr (UKH)

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This article suggests a reversible transliteration for the historical Ukrainian alphabet.

The paper is well-written and thoroughly investigates the case.

However, in my view, it lacks an implementation of the approach. I am expecting this to be implemented and tested using actual data. That could help the community who work on the Ukrainian language to use the implemented tool and through feedback, which in turn it could improve the approach in case it overlooked some situation in the transliteration process.