Reframe the abstract and make the title brief to best showcase your article. In the absence of a comprehensive statistical analysis for a comparative study, the results seem to be inconsequential. It will be more in-depth than the author might have made the discussion with the help of an effective statistical tool. There must be a greater number of institutions included in the study, and groups should be created based on age ranges, financial situation, subjects taught, student involvement, or factors like the availability of tobacco products.
