

Review of: "Nanomaterials: History, Production, Properties, Applications, and Toxicities"

Yonghui Song

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

In general, the manuscript tried to review the nanomaterials from their history, application, and environmental and societal impacts, aiming at promoting the research, application, and management of nanomaterials. The manuscript has been designed over a long time, with a wide scope, and in a multidimensional manner. However, there are defects existing, as follows but not limited to:

1. It seems that the title of the manuscript could not well cover the contents.
2. There is only one table and one figure in the manuscript, but it is full of words. Could it be possible to make it more vivid?
3. There are NPs, NMs, NM, or even NN (is it a correct one?) throughout the text; could the authors please check whether they were used properly?
4. It is recommended that full names of NPs and NMs should be used in the keywords.
5. Could the authors please check the reference list, paying attention to the journal titles, the integrity of the references, etc.?