

Review of: "The theory of early prosthetic loosening — a concise overview"

Samo Fokter

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The question in this research is the mechanism of aseptic loosening in total hip arthroplasty. Since the exact mechanism has not been entirely clarified, the topic is relevant in the field. The manuscript briefly covers all existing theories in a well-structured and organised manner. The conclusions are consistent with evidence and arguments presented and do address the main question posed. Important references are included. However, relevant references should be presented in some detail and discussed in the discussion section.