The topics discussed are interesting, but it is a shame that the discussion of sustainable development is not discussed in depth, as evidence of the problems that exist in the Mekong River from environmental, social and economic aspects in the background. So it should be explained so that it becomes clearer about the urgency of this topic. Even though this article is a literature review, it must still provide sharper theoretical findings and conclusions regarding sustainable development issues, especially if they are linked to the 17 SDGs goals which are focused on point 14 for ocean or water ecosystems.
