Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This is an important topic in sociological terms, also the methodology used by the researchers is interesting and relevant. Certainly, toys are important in the early socialization of children; likewise, toys can be used as objects of study to represent the fundamental values of the society in which they are contextualized, for this reason it would be important to incorporate a gender perspective as well as the influence of other factors, such as technology.

The analysis of the results could be more qualitative, developing the fundamental findings in more depth.

The conclusions are also too short, it could go deeper on the most important results of the investigation.
