

Review of: "[Short Communication] Building Laws and Public Health: An undergraduate elective pedagogy for architecture students sensitising on the role of building practitioners in preventing disease through the built environment."

Elham Mehrinejad Khotbehsara¹

¹ University of Southern Queensland

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Thanks to the authors for sharing this interesting topic

-The paper's abstract and introduction could benefit from greater clarity and structure. For instance, the abstract should provide a concise summary of the study's objectives, methodologies, and key findings. Additionally, the introduction could be streamlined to clearly state the problem the study addresses and why it's important. This would help readers grasp the paper's focus more easily.

-To enhance the paper's educational value, it would be beneficial to dedicate a section to each exercise, describing its objectives, methodologies, and the lessons learned by the students. Providing concrete examples from these exercises can help readers better understand the practical application of building laws in preventing diseases within the built environment.

Hope you find these comment helpful.

Kind regards,

Elham M Khotbehsara

University of Southern Queensland