Your research is very interesting, but there are several notes that might be useful for improving the writing in your article, including:

- In the abstract chapter, it is highly recommended that when the author wants to provide suggestions, he/she can be more operational regarding relevant suggestions, for example, what factors are suggested through what activities to achieve the expected impact, making it easier for readers to understand.
- In the discussion chapter, you can add more adequate references to discuss each factor found in your research; you can also add comparisons of research results from various countries so that they can provide more benefits for international readers.
- Meanwhile, the conclusion chapter can provide more operational suggestions, for example, what companies should do regarding organizational factors, management factors, environmental factors, and human factors, which are valid constructs for predicting health and safety programs in their workplace.
