

Review of: "Decolonisation of Health in East Africa: Opinion Piece"

Mohammad Aadil Khan

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Very well written , fluent and interesting

A very clear analysis of the current situation has been done.

However the article is lacky in organic planning of ideas in order to overcome the situation which concerns the main important reviews where sending the scientific articles and the situation of the family doctors in Global North (apart some sporadical examples)

African doctors have the sufficient number of patients to create scientific articles which could be incisive in the global panorama. For this reason they ought to create their own important reviews without the necessity of sending articles to usual Northern Reviews. In so doing the could face other Countries as equals from the scientific point of view.

See for example ANME (African Network of Medical Excellence) way of working