This is a fascinating topic, but unfortunately, I do not consider the manuscript a scientific linguistic paper. Instead, I see this manuscript as an essay.

First, the manuscript must include all the necessary sections to develop a scientific inquiry. The framework is inaccurate and lacks essential elements such as appropriate citations and more relevant information, for example, a description of the Ukrainian gender system. On the other hand, no methodology section, which is fundamental in a study design. The author should have explained the corpus.

Regarding results, there is no explanation about the analysis, and the information needs to be more organized. For example, the author could examine using phonology, semantic, and pragmatic language structures.

I recommended rewriting the manuscript based on the comments.
