This article has a great deal of potential and takes up an important and relevant topic. However, it reads more as a draft than a completed article. The bullet points used throughout run the flow of the article, and disturb the clarity of the arguments. I suggest the author rewrites these sections to make coherent arguments.

The article tries to cover a lot of important topics, all of which are worthy of an article on their own. I suggest focusing on one or two of these topics, or making it more clear that this article aims for a superficial overview. The methodology section needs to be expanded considerably. The very short section that is currently included weakens the arguments and hinders the clarity of the work.

This article has potential, so I hope the author continues to work on developing it.
