This is not a scientific article. Scientific articles must have:

1. An aim and then a theme to propose a direction for the work.
2. Sound methodology abiding by NDA, principals, and ethics. Even sample size evaluations should be included.
3. Results must adhere to protocols adopted and, importantly, be backed by valid statistics.
4. The findings should be discussed in a coherent and cohesive manner in the sense that literature support, along with declarations and validity, must be available. In that sense, thorough reasoning should also be present.
