

Review of: "Women In Slum Risking Their Safety To Access And Usage Of Basic Water And Sanitation Facilities"

Pratiksha Haz

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The Review paper is very well written and the methodology part is also well structured the data analysis is also done well. Moreover, the abstract and keywords are sound and clear. This study is so significant as well as relevant in today's world and the paper has done complete justice to it . The paper is a guide for how to solve the slum sanitation problem and the need to reframe and rework on existing slum policies. The Paper has also successfully tried to focus on every problem faced by women and given a better understanding of how sanitation and water issues can cause crime. By reading the poem in the acknowledgments section I can make out the author had emerged himself in the research and went in-depth to understand slums, Women, and sanitation issues.