

Review of: "Distance as the most essential form of human thought and subjectivity"

Great job and novelty to the field, the manuscript should be published. Just a few notes for improvement:

- “analyze western philosophical literature...” is not precise about revisiting related thoughts of some German philosophers: Max Scheler, Ernst Cassirer, Helmuth Plessner, Arnold Gehlen, Heidegger, and Hans Blumenberg.
- conclusion part might include some more confirmation on the awareness of distance, and some discussion how to achieve this awareness, before putting forward several questions for further inquiries.

This is a fascinating topic, and I thoroughly love reading it. Hope to see the final publication soon. Thank you!
