

Review of: "“Saving the Forest” with a REDD+ Project: Socio-Ecological Repercussions on Indigenous People in Cambodia"

Kampanad Bhaktikul¹

¹ Mahidol University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The attempt to protect this conservation area, especially in Cambodia, is not easy. The demand for wildlife consumption is arising, competing with wildlife trade in this sub-region. Demand and supply in the trafficking toward Southeast Asia need to be cut off by international cooperation. However, the beliefs in wildlife consumption are strongly challenged.

May I suggest the author(s) add in a trend of the significance of deforestation and wildlife trafficking in this area with a graph.