

Review of: "Does Anger Management Among Prisoners Work? — A Review of Recent Meta-Analyses"

Santiago Resett

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper deals with a topic of great interest and in a very little-studied population. However, the manuscript has notable limitations.

The introduction is poor and without specifying what it is going to contribute to the scientific literature. On the other hand, no objectives are proposed. This would have contributed to the quality of the work. On the other hand, the methodology is extremely weak, which makes the work impossible to replicate. There are many unanswered questions. For example, how were the studies that took part selected? What methodology was used? etc. There are many questions without answers.

The presentation of the results is poor since it is a mere appreciation of some research that does not know how they were selected, in what database, with what keywords, etc. On the other hand, the introduction, format, objectives, methodology, results, etc., are not followed.