Dear authors and editors

Unfortunately I must advise the journal to reject this manuscript. Although the authors have described a very interesting example of higher education policy, I cannot conclude that it is a research paper. Probably, it is a promising initial step to start with a future project. The description includes many ideas that can inspire relevant research questions. Then, the authors should decide which methodology suits their interests better. I am sure the final outcome will be relevant for the specialised literature, but right now it is still too early for that.

Yours
